For clean fur around the eyes

Is your dog's face discoloured beneath or around the eyes? Do its tears appear red or even brown in colour? Does your dog have brown or red spots around its mouth or do these spots remain when it licks itself?

Not all dogs experience the issue of discolouration due to lacrimal fluid - it's usually not noticeable in those pets with darker fur.

Unfortunately this means that it's lovely white dogs with fluffy coats that are most affected by this problem.

This discolouration occurs due to an imbalance in the gut flora which leads to a deviation from the normal pH value and acidity level. Some deviations occur due to incorrect nutrition, while some are the result of a genetic predisposition.

The spots are caused by bacteria which develop in this area and end up in the dog's fur via the saliva.

A combination of herbal ingredients provides just the right solution to solve this problem for your pet. The healing properties of these plants affect the pH of the bodily fluids and also provide an anti-inflammatory effect.

The desired result is achieved by supporting and strengthening the immune system.
